ROOSEVELT GETS ASSURANCE FRANCE INTENDS TO PAY

Information Comes From An Authoritative French Source

EXPECT WORD SOON

The Newly-Appointed French Ambassador Likely To Bring the Word

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 30.—President Roosevelt has received assurance from an authoritative French source that France intends shortly to pay the $19,000,000 debt installment on which it deferred payment last December, it was learned today.

It is expected that formal notification of the French decision to make the payment will be brought by Andre DeLaBoulaye, the new French ambassador expected to arrive in two or three weeks.

The President has been told that the principal reason why France deferred payment last December was because it did not wish to make the payment to the Hoover administration. At that time French spokesmen assured Roosevelt's advisor that France

Animals Transformed Into People In Movie Thriller

"Island of Lost Souls," movie version of H. G. Wells' eerie adventure story, comes to the Grand Theatre tonight and Friday with a cast headed by Charles Loughton, Bela Lugosi, Richard Arlen, Lela Hyams, and Kathleen Burke, who was chosen as the "Panther Woman" from among 60,000 competitors.

The story centers around a skilled scientist, who has become half-mad because of his fanatical desire to create men out of beasts. Outlawed from civilized countries, he has set up headquarters on a remote South Seas island, where he has succeeded in transforming apes, dogs, lions and other animals into new creatures, resembling men.

A shipwrecked American is rescued and given shelter on the doctor's island. There he is horrified at the beast-men; shocked beyond endurance when he discovers Lota, a beautiful young girl, is really another of the madman's creations.

After reaching him on the island when his sweetheart chatters a vessel and rushes to the scene. But their escape is blocked, and their lives endangered, when the beast men taste blood for the first time, and turn on their creator.

MINER DIES IN HOSPITAL

Ashland, Mar. 30.—Thwarting death during an entombment of 100 hours in an abandoned mine working, John Cheslock, Jr., 28, who was rescued last night, lost his grim fight for life in the Ashland State Hospital this morning. He died of shock and internal injuries. Cheslock was buried alive last Saturday under a slide of coal and debris while picking coal in a mine hole near the abandoned Lehigh Valley Coal Company Sayre Collieries, near Mount Carmel. A companion, Stanley Orisky, 27, successfully clambered out of the breach, with the aid of a rope. Although abandoning hope of rescuing Cheslock alive, workers had labored to relieve his body. Yesterday afternoon they were amazed to hear the trapped man's voice. He was brought out four hours later and rushed to the hospital where he died within 12 hours.

SHACK BURNS

A small shack built by boys and used as a play center in the rear of Fifth avenue, was burned last night. Consolidated Department responded at 11.10.

WASHINGTON DOESN'T NEED THEM NOW

(By "The Stroller")

Teachers cannot always complain of "wise-cracking" students. Sometimes the instructors themselves come in the category of the "Smart Ales."

A few days ago a young man at Bristol High who instructs the manual training classes walked into the domestic science room, where many senior girls have been busy fashioning garments for their forthcoming trip to the capital city. Seeing a pile of soft pretty silk on one of the tables he inquired of the instructress "What is that?"

"Oh, that's a pair of pajamas for Washington."

"Why, I thought he was dead," was the quick retort.

NAZI PARTY PRESSES FORWARD

Berlin, Germany, Mar. 30.—The Nazi party pressed forward today with the mobilization of its 1,500,000 members to the last man for the anti-Jewish boycott campaign officially scheduled to begin Saturday.

With the boycott already under way in scores of cities in an attempt to end the atrocity of lies abroad, Nazi officials expressed the hope that foreign anti-German propaganda would end in time for them to call off the boycott before it was officially launched.

Supported by Chancellor Hitler, who declared the Jews must be made to realize they will feel full effects of demonstrations abroad, preparations went forward at high speed. Reports said Nazis were searching houses for Jews and noting down the addresses where they were found.

Plans for the boycott, which will affect Jews in business, professions and schools, were excitedly discussed on street corners everywhere and persons described as heretofore indifferent to Jews, were lending the movement their support.

STATE TO ASSIST POORER SCHOOLS

HARRISBURG, Mar. 30.—A $5,000,000 revolving fund from which State payments would be made to school districts unable to raise revenue from taxes has been added to the emergency school program.

Representative Wilson, of McKean, chairman of the House Education Committee, accompanied the announcement with the statement:

"This is the first day I've been sure the schools in the poorer districts won't have to close."

The fund will be obtained by a temporary suspension of State payments to the teachers' retirement fund. Payments suspended during the new biennium will be repaid with interest.

Wilson said the plan will not reduce payments to the retirement fund, but will represent an emergency loan from the fund to the State Treasury, earmarked for education expenses.

The Education Committee chairman repeated previous statements that all bill-reducing State payments to local

First Break in Senate's Solid Support For Administration's Bill

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—(INS)—The first break in the Senate's solid support of the administration farm relief bill loomed today with the Senate agriculture committee ready to include a modified Simpson price-fixing plan as an alternative measure of Federal aid to farmers.

The administration repudiated the Simpson plan in drafting its bill. The committee undoubtedly will approve it, with a bow to the several hundred thousand members of the National Farmers' Union. The Simpson plan would give the government power to fix prices to the producer on farm products and guarantee him cost of production on the portion of each crop consumed in domestic markets.

The bill will be reported with the administration's four major relief plans intact, probably today. After that, the fight will be transferred to the Senate, where Eastern business interests will assail the measure as certain to increase the cost of living without providing material benefit to farmers. In the end, administration leaders asserted, the President will get the power he asked.

MAY RULE OUT ALL STATE BANKS

By Robert S. Thornburgh
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—(INS)—Interpreted as the death-knell of the State banking system, the Federal Reserve Board today issued an opinion by Walter Wyatt, its general counsel, holding Congress has the constitutional authority to establish a single, national commercial banking system.

The opinion, which was submitted to the Senate banking and currency committee, cited many decisions of the Supreme Court which would permit Congress to confine commercial banking to a national system to the exclusion of the State banks.

Federal Reserve Board members were held to be of the opinion that "the establishment of a unified system of banking under national supervision is essential to fundamental banking reform."

The ruling laid down the following program to establish a single banking system:

THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1933

WAITING ON ROOSEVELT

It is to be hoped that President Roosevelt, who so energetically applied himself to the domestic emergency facing him at the beginning of his administration, soon can find time to give his attention to some of the international problems with which he must deal. Included in the latter list is the disarmament conference now marking time at Geneva.

The conference has been in progress for more than a year. The results to date are practically nothing. There has been a great deal of discussion, but little action. A simple and promising formula was placed before the conference by President Hoover, but it, like suggestions from other sources, has failed to receive indorsement.

Where rests the chief blame for the conference's failure to achieve anything is not easy to say. The many conflicting interests involved and the fears and suspicions entertained by nations generally one toward another have made the problem of reaching an agreement on arms reduction one of tremendous difficulty.

There is reported to be a feeling in conference circles that the United States may be able to save the situation, once Mr. Roosevelt gets a chance to give it his attention. This optimism, it is to be hoped, is justified. It can not be denied that the conference is nearing a crisis. Unless something is done soon to remove the obstacles from its way, it must collapse.

The United States, however, already has gone far in its efforts to smooth the path. It can not alone assure success. Europe must do its part.

President Roosevelt, in conferences before and since his inauguration, has discussed the disarmament meeting, but he has been handicapped in concentrating upon the questions involved by the urgent need of giving immediate attention to the American banking situation. Now that the latter is clearing up satisfactorily it may be that soon he can take hold of this problem. The matter is one which has world importance. Mr. Roosevelt realizes this, and he can be trusted to give it consideration at the earliest possible moment. Meantime, the other participants might help the situation by getting together on some of the related questions peculiar to themselves.

FOLK SONGS

For comparatively young a nation, the United States has a wealth of folk songs, as many private collections have revealed. Many of the best are the products of isolation, as in the mountains of Kentucky. The Negro cabins in the South and the lumber camps of the North have made their contributions. The open cattle ranges of the West, where the cowboys once roamed freely, produced many songs.

But such isolation is largely of the past. Moreover, music of all varieties, from classics to jazz, now penetrates to the remotest communities through the radio and other instruments. But it is a penalty of such progress that the folk songs are in danger of being lost. For this reason, the Library of Congress has undertaken the commendable task of making a national collection of American folk songs.

CHAPTER FIFTY-THREE

"Oddsfish! If ever there was a rogue who knew how to pluck victory from defeat, how to win advantage from disaster, you are that rogue, indeed, Charles. It's not the first time ye've pushed back the springs of a gin that held ye. Ye may thank the ready fertility of your lying. Faith! Ye've a great gift of it, whatever."

"If ye mean the fable of the Spanish plate fleet," said de Bernis, "you are not to suppose that was an invention of the moment. It had been long premeditated. It was the lure with which from the outset I had meant to draw Leach to Maldiva. The fact that he was in need of careening was no more than I expected of him. He always was; for he was always a bad seaman."

When the tale was done, and whilst Sir Henry was lading out a punch of rum and limes and sugar which the steward had prepared for them, Captain Aldridge stirred in his chair to ask a question.

"You have made all clear but one thing. What I don't understand is why you should have fought Leach this morning when we were already off Maldiva. Since you knew that we had but to close our grip so as to hold him, why the devil should you have risked your life against him?"

"Risk?" Monsieur de Bernis was contemptuous. "That was no risk. Leach may have been a swordsman to pirates; to a swordsman he was just a pirate."

"Ye'll need a better answer, Charles," Morgan admonished him. For once de Bernis appeared self-conscious. He hesitated; then shrugged.

"Oh, there were reasons, of course. For one thing I owed it to him." Almost unconsciously his dark eyes travelled to Priscilla, who was steadily regarding him, then back again to Morgan's great yellow countenance. "He had used expressions to be answered in no other way, and he had done things payment for which I choose to regard as my personal concern. Besides, Morgan, if Leach had been alive when you have in sight, be sure there would have been no such tame surrender. His was a very desperate spirit."

"Ah, bah! What could he have done, trapped here?"

"He could have taken to the woods with his men, just as I told you in the message Miss Priscilla bore you; and there you could not have pursued him. He might have lived to recommence. Even if he did not, before he came by his end he might have wrought such evil as I must have accounted beyond repair."

"Why, what could he have done? What evil?" Morgan pressed him.

Again Monsieur de Bernis hesitated a little. Then, with an abrupt gesture, he indicated Major Sands and Miss Priscilla Harradine.

"This gentleman and this lady would have remained in his hands if he had chosen defiance. And that, from the nature of him he certainly would have chosen."

Morgan's brows went up, as he looked at the Major. It was as if he marvelled that de Bernis should have moved to risks for that nobody.

again when his glance travelled on to Miss Priscilla. He guffawed his sudden understanding, and slapped the table with his great hand.

"So! So! Blimey, it becomes plain. There was a rivalry between ye. Madam said you had been mighty gallant."

His elephantine body shook with laughter. The roar of it reverberated through the cabin. The Major coughed and scowled. Miss Priscilla's face flamed scarlet, and her troubled, indignant eyes reproved the indecent mirth. The lean, leathern face of Aldridge was distorted in a sour grin.

Only Monsieur de Bernis remained entirely impassive. He waited patiently until the Admiral's laughter had diminished. Then he spoke icily.

"The King may have made you a knight and he may have made you Governor of Jamaica; but in spite of it, Morgan, you remain just a villain. Pray pay no heed to him, Priscilla. Though he sits in the cabin, by his manners his proper place is the forecastle."

"The devil take your sour tongue!" Morgan answered him, without malice, laughter still bubbling in him. He raised his glass to the lady. "No offence, ma'am. My homage to you. I toast your happy deliverance, oh, and yours, Major Shore."

"Major Sands, sir," snapped the soldier, looking his disgust of the old buccaneer.

"Same thing," laughed Morgan, to increase that disgust.

Captain Aldridge cleared his throat, and sat squarely to the table.

"Shall we come to business, Sir Henry? What's to be done with these rascals ashore?"

"Ah, yes, indeed. To be sure." He looked at de Bernis. "What should you say, Charles?"

Monsieur de Bernis answered promptly. "First send a crew to take possession of the Centaur and repair the damage you've done to her. Then order the guns of the Black Swan to be hauled to the sea. When that's done, open fire on the hull where she lies careened ashore, and demolish her. After that we can go home."

"And leave those cut-throats free?" cried Aldridge, scandalized.

Nor was he the only one to experience that emotion. The Major, emboldened by a gust of indignation, ventured to interpose.

"That is the advice of a pirate! Stab me, it is! The advice of a pirate! Monsieur de Bernis has the fellow-feeling of one buccaneer for another. That's plain."

An utter silence of amazement followed that explosion. Very slowly Sir Henry Morgan turned his eyes upon the speaker. He slewed his bulk round on his chair, so that he might the more squarely confront the soldier.

"And who the devil desired your views?" he asked.

The Major got up in a heat, outraged that anyone of these ruffians should take such a tone with him. "You seem to overlook, sir, that I hold the King's commission, and that..."

"Hold what the devil you please, sir," Morgan trumpeted to interrupt him. "I ask you how the devil this concerns you?"

"I am telling you, sir, that I hold the King's commission."

"The King has my sympathy, by Jove! Sit down, man. You're interrupting business. Sit down!"

But the Major was not disposed to be browbeaten, particularly in the presence of Miss Priscilla. Circumstances of late had compelled him to submit to play a part in which there was no glory and little dignity. But from those circumstances he was now happily delivered. He was no longer on an island, at the mercy of a gang of cut-throats; but on board a vessel of the Crown, where his rank must be recognized and respected, so that he insisted upon his due.

"You shall hear me, sir," he answered, and was not deterred by the deepening scowl on Sir Henry's brow. "It is my right to be heard. My right. As an officer of the Crown it is my duty to protest—to protest with all the vehemence at my command—against a proposal which is nothing short of dishonouring to the King's Majesty."

Sir Henry, glooming up at him, with a heavy sneer that not even his heavy moustaches could conceal, spoke with ominous quiet in the pause the Major made. "Have ye done, sir?"

"I have not yet begun," he was answered.

"That was but the exordium," said de Bernis.

But Morgan crashed his fist down on the table. "Must I remind you, Major, that by the rank ye're flaunting you owe me obedience? You'll speak when ye're bidden."

"You forget, sir..."

"I forget nothing," Sir Henry bawled. "Sit down, sir, as I bid you. Show me defiance and — Od's my life! — I'll have you in irons. Sit down!"

The Major's prominent eyes still looked defiance for a second. Then they faltered under the overbearing gaze of Sir Henry. With a contemptuous shrug he flung himself into his chair again, at some little distance from the table and crossed his legs.

By Davis J. Walsh
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Mar. 30—(INS)—Regardless of disclaimers, you can write it down among the family memoirs in a bold, legible hand that peace is soon to be declared here in the war for the control of the heavyweight championship. You also will be justified in assuming that, when Madison Square Garden and the Schmeling people sit down at the same table again, one of the demands will be that Jack Dempsey is to be "taken care of" by the Garden.

Just how or in what manner, I won't profess to say at this time. But if the Garden wants Schmeling—and it does—and Dempsey wants to operate out of the Garden—and I think he will—the matter can be arranged. That is, provided the setup is satisfactory to all concerned including Mr. Dempsey who seems to have certain fixed ideas concerning satisfaction. On thinking things over, it will be well to include Mr. James J. Johnston who seems to have a contract.

In any case, a deal is inevitable and all horseplay now being carried on will, when the time comes, run very substantially for a man by the name of E. Pluribus Sweeney. Schmeling is coming back here in a little more than a week to begin training for the Baer fight but even if he wins that one, he'll be no nearer the championship than if his opponent was some very prominent letter carrier with step-children and adenoids.

To be mercifully brief about this somewhat in the manner of McGuffey's third reader—

Schmeling wants the champion. The Garden has the champion. The champion wants Schmeling. Schmeling wants both.

Or can it be I'm violating a confidence?

SPORT SHOTS by Maxwell Gordon

WE HAD a visitor in Bristol the other day, who was quite an athlete in his youth around these parts, in the person of William McKnight . . . better known to many of the older citizens as "Piggy" McKnight.

Mr. McKnight, who has been away from his native town for many years, spent a few happy hours renewing old friendships around the Fourth Ward, where he was well-known as a basketball player and boxer.

Many stories have been told about this interesting character both on the old basketball floor in Pearson's barn on Buckley street, where the Elks tennis courts are now located, and in the boxing ring. McKnight, who met some of the best fighters of his time in the squared circle under the name of "Billy" Dunovan, hated the nickname of "Piggy" and was afraid some Bristol fan would yell "Go get him, Piggy" during one of his many fights in Philadelphia . . . He didn't want the fight fans to get on to the name.

Before each fight McKnight would get the local rooters together and warn them against using this detested nickname . . . usually threatening them with a trouncing if they ever did.

"Only once," said McKnight, "during a bout in Philadelphia, some enthusiastic fan got excited and yelled 'Knock him out, Piggy!' . . . Fortunately nobody paid any attention to it but myself. . . . After the fight I looked all over the place hoping I could find the person who yelled . . . but luckily for him, he couldn't be found." . . . Mr. McKnight now lives in Philadelphia in the Kensington district.

Scout Leaders In Session Here For Training Course of Morrisville No. 1, and Scoutmaster of the Bob White Patrol will be Scoutmaster William Forepaugh, of Troy.

An instruction period in making troop meeting rooms attractive was led by Scoutmaster William Grunert, of Bristol. A song period was enjoyed under the leadership of assistant scoutmaster Harold Washburn, of Morrisville No. 2. Mr. Washburn also played his guitar to the enjoyment of everybody.

The evening's training program was concluded with an hour round table discussion of Scoutmaster problems led by Scout Executive Livermore. Each man who was present wrote down his most difficult problem, and it was presented for general discussion. Many helpful ideas were exchanged, and everyone expressed their appreciation of the program. The repeating of the Scout oath at a campfire circle gave a feeling of inspiration as the Scouters departed.

CLEVER PROMOTER CAN STILL ATTRACT FANS

(This is the third of a series of three articles outlining the views of Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, on the two big heavyweight fights to be held in the next few months, and the future of the boxing game.)

By Walter Dietzel
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Mar. 30—(INS)—"I know that the time of million dollar purses and several-million-dollar gates is gone forever."

Max Schmeling, ex-champion and heavyweight contender, told the interviewer when asked what he thought of future business conditions in prize fighting.

"But I still hold that a clever promoter can do very much in attracting the fans. There aren't any great promoters left since Tex Rickard died. Naturally, Jack Dempsey, the old Manassa Mauler, always is a trump. But a promoter does not only promote, he must have money himself, and quite a lot, before he can become a success."

Schmeling then revealed that the grudge Joe Jacobs and he bear the Madison Square Garden is not so much directed against the garden itself, as against Johnston, the promoter.

"Johnston is entirely incompetent, and if the garden would only get rid of him, it would be all the better for the garden and for us."

Discussing his chances for the next heavyweight championship, Max said: "If I defeat Baer, which I am sure I will, I shall have to fight Sharkey again. There is nobody else left. In that case, we shall have the promoters running after us; for everybody will start a scramble to capture the bout for himself. If, by that time, the depression is definitely over, I foresee record gates and purses."

The conversation then turned to the latest biography of Schmeling by Rolf Nuernberg, a German sports writer. Schmeling was very indignant at the charges Nuernberg raised against Sharkey, American boxing officials in general and American sports writers. "Nuernberg has always been lighting me," Schmeling remarked. "He is one of those sports writers who is always crabbing, always smelling a rat and always opposing everybody. Nuernberg has been treated with the utmost courtesy in the United States. It is rather nasty of him to write that way."

"I have not read his biography and I do not intend to do so, because I do not value his opinions. I do not care what he says, writes or believes. That settles the matter for me."

Roosevelt Gets Assurance France Intends To Pay

intended to make the payment but also said: "We'll not pay it to Hoover."

The delay in the French payment since March 4th is due to internal political situation in France, the French Chamber of Deputies having once voted against the payment, and it difficult to give their constituents a convincing reason for approving it now.

The administration here, however, expects France will make the payment soon and thus place itself in a position of equality with other nations seeking a revision of their debts.

The administration, balked at getting a favorable report on the World Court by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, will renew its drive at another committee session next Wednesday. Senator Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, who initiated the drive, announced he would press for a committee vote next Wednesday. If he can obtain a vote, it was apparent the resolution of adherence would be reported favorably.

Smith was arrested by Corporal Evans and Dien, of the Highway Patrol, arranged before Justice of the Peace Krouse, of Langhorne, and held under $1,000 bail to await the result of the injuries to Miss Landis and Bull. James G. Keiran, of 3265 Torrens avenue, was the driver of the truck.

of time to avoid too sudden and revolutionary a change in our existing financial structure and to allow time for existing state banks to adjust themselves to the situation, by converting into national banks or disconting the transaction of commercial banking," Wyatt said.

The opinion was based on the authority of Congress to establish the National and Federal Reserve Systems and take necessary action to promote the efficiency of these systems; to protect the currency and to remove obstructions to interstate commerce which arise through bank failures.

State To Assist Poor Schools

Representative Thomas F. Wilson, McKean County, Education Committee chairman, was holding to his plan to ask for a reconsideration of the vote by which the teachers' salaries cutting bill was defeated Monday night. If the reconsideration is granted, he purposes to amend the measure by giving local Courts jurisdiction over cuts in excess of 10 per cent.

As defeated, the bill empowered the Department of Public Instruction to pass upon requests to reduce salaries beyond the permissive 10 per cent.

Fewer Teachers Now Handle More Pupils

many districts some supervisors have been returned to teaching positions to fill vacancies.

According to Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent, the reduced teaching staff in the State is caring for a record high enrollment of pupils, and in many schools the teachers are carrying a much heavier teaching load than they should. While elementary grades are expected to show a slight drop in total enrollment this year, the high school attendance has increased. Unable to find jobs or go to college, thousands of recent high school graduates have returned to their schools for post-graduate studies.

The total number of teachers and supervisory officers in Pennsylvania this year is announced as 62,771, compared to 63,519 last year, a decrease of 748. In 1930-31 there were 67,676 teachers, and in 1929-30 the State had 61,629 teachers and supervisory officers. Five years ago there were 60,583 on the teacher rolls.

"Needless reduction of teaching staffs is a poor economy for a community these days," Doctor Rule says. "Thousands of teachers not only are helping friends and relatives through the emergency but they are feeding and clothing countless numbers of children who otherwise could not attend school. It is conservatively estimated that teachers of this State last year spent $20,000,000 of their own money for welfare work, and in addition supplied half a million articles of clothing. Half of the teachers report having provided $6,000,000 meals for children at an average cost of eight cents each. Certainly the teacher is an asset to the entire community."
